ok, let me call AT&T and see if it is 'international coverage' I would need or something else?
"Cellular at Sea" coverage ..or maybe it's both!...I'll see how pricey it is ...

Hi Bella...I will be on a cruise with [REDACTED] entire family for his parents 50th wedding anniversary June 26-30...would it be possible to get cell coverage for this trip? I don't really want to be 'on call' but if someone really needs me I am wondering if we should look in to cell phone coverage?

I can call AT&T if you like...i just need to know all the answers to what they will ask in order to recieve the information I am looking for....like account number, any passwords etc. so I can find out how much it would cost for the 5 days I am at sea...

this is from the Disney Cruise website:

Cell Phone Services

In addition to dedicated locations where you can take advantage of ship-to-shore calling, Disney Cruise Line features Cellular at Sea phone service—so you can use your own cell phone or wireless PDA just as you would on land. Available from most cell phone carriers including AT&T, Sprint and T-Mobile, this service is currently accessible in staterooms.

Note: Usage rates and international roaming rates vary as you travel. Be sure to contact your cell phone provider to learn these rates before your cruise. Disney Cruise Line recommends that Guests seeking to avoid the unwanted costs associated with data downloads keep their wireless devices turned off or in airplane mode during their cruise.
