Yes, quite normal experience, however it doesn't happen too often since wake turbulence is generated by another airplanes wing kind a like a car when you pass by a semi truck the air is turbulent same thing happens with an airplane wing..

I'll send you another email, that just happen an Airbus 380 has tremendous wake turbulence since it's so heavy,. Crossed paths with a smaller corporate jet, I'll send you the email, it's good reading share it with Ike yes he does! thanks for this info...

So I have another question for you! Since you are my favorite, trusted pilot and after all...We flew to Orlando and as we were on our descent we experienced going through another planes wake!?! I have never been on a plane that dipped way left and then way right again...everyone was a bit disturbed by it including me and [REDACTED] The flight attendant (who was standing in the aisle) explained what we went through...I must say it was a slow dip to left and then right...her explanation made sense to us and I was thankful for it...but...can you elaborate?! All normal stuff?

Hi, Happy4th!

Yes, I'm only guessing,. But JE said he would pick the Paint color on July 21st, when he gets back to NY,, I'm thinking he may go to LSJ from Paris,, he asked for flight times to the island from Paris,, but he does that all the time,,,,, I'll keep you posted if JE tells me anything,,, of course Dave and Bill are in Paris with JE,,, but JE keeps sometimes keep me in the loop anyhow,,,

Take care
