Great discounted airfares

When comparing fares departing in September to fares the same ones departing in August, the average price for U.S. departures falls more than 20 percent.

Fewer crowds

Most summer destinations estimate dwindling crowds once Labor Day passes. This can be an added incentive for September travel, especially for those who prefer less congestion and limited traffic.

Lower 5 star hotel rates

Luxury resorts often advertise the most significant discounts during the tail end of summer and into early fall. "Once September hits, most destination spots are in 'low season,' so you can find some great deals, not to mention the great weather that comes along with September

Mild weather

While one activity may not be in season, there is always another to take its place. That's why travelers should always consider off-season destinations during the month of September.

And of course our great Service!!!!

Fares start at $2,900 for Business class International Round Trip
