I was actually saying it is better to buy the non refundable changeable fare at $795 and save the $200 because I don't believe we will completely cancel the flight but I do believe we could change it. So therefore, save the $200 as we may need to spend more money to change the ticket...

So when we purchase refundable we would get our money back if we cancel. Thing is, I don't believe we will cancel but I do believe there is a chance we would need to change...therefore, it makes more sense to save the $200 and purchase the non-refundable changeable ticket ...right?
