Hi [REDACTED] Sounds like you know what to do but just in case- jeffrey is showing you he has a Conference call today at 12:30pm. The dial-in details are in the text. You really have to read from the bottom up to make sure you know all the details. Remind jeffrey of the conference call at 11:30am in an email (example: reminder of 12:30 Conf Call with Jeremy et al. In one hour) then at 12:30 you ask him if he is ready for you to dial in for him. He will say yes. You dial the number and follow the voice instructions. You will punch in the pin code. When it prompts you to say your name say: Julia on behalf of Jeff. DO NOT say his last name. All this being said, Jeffrey might dial in himself!! ♦

Did you want me on the call as well?

How would you feel about this:

I'll just schedule a time for them to talk to my "due diligence advisor/team". You can phone in and ask whatever you like, under a pseudonym (even just first name, not last name). You can open with something like, "Hi this is Jeff, I'm helping Jeremy check out what you're planning to do with Layer One and make sure it's going to be a good investment for Deploy Capital. Can I dive right in to questions?"

I think that should be fine, and is not inaccurate, just imprecise.

If you did want to video them it's a bit more complicated, but I can come up with something.

Hi Jeffrey,

It's probably best for me to just stick to saying "I raised a fund" going forward (I haven't said anything inconsistent with this). I'm concerned otherwise potential investments googling your name might get spooked (especially given SF politics).

I talked with Vincenzo about this and we agreed the above line would be inconspicuous enough.

If you do want to talk to a potential investment directly, I can just say that you are a strategic LP and you wanted to talk, which should dilute their concern and explain why you wanted to talk.

I'd like your guidance & approval in case Vincenzo and I missed something with this plan.

Jeremy
