ha...well, my men are at football practice, so I am cooking!
Here is my dilemma...when I click on the Google Calendar app it says Select Google Accounts
...under this is a plus sign (+) next to it it says Add a Good account with an arrow..I can't click
on any of it
sending screen shot

If your email is there add it, if it is there. Switch it on Here's a video of the same.

OK I think I like recall now what is happening. At one point on my other phone I would add in line items to my calendar. I wanted the calendar to email me each time I put a line item in at the time I designated. The calendar that I was using was not doing it. So you did something special and hooked me up with another calendar. Do you recall this? I have 2 calendar on my phone. One just says calendar (I don't use that one) and the other says Google Calendar. That is the one I add in my line items to and it will email me whatever I typed in at the time I have input it at.

That's the prompt for turning the calendar OFF.
What are you doing??!! LOL

Cancel that and tell me why you think your calendar is not on your phone, please.

think yes I want to keep on my phone.
Other options are
delete and cancel

It must have turned off when we were having password troubles.

There's also a Google Calendar app
installed on your phone, in case you want to use it instead/as well.

Hi James. My google calendar is not in my phone? Help. Critical I have it. It's asking me to go to settings and manage account. I don't want to mess anything up. I don't see 'manage accounts' in settings. (?)
