well, sounds like you are over a little hump and are dealing with things...hope the job is good...and yes, prepare yourself for your next step in life!

Gemma did NOT like being outside in the bitter cold...it hurt her little paws! we would go out and come right back in...today is sunny and beautiful at 61 degrees! So weird! but loving it..took her for a nice long walk this early am! :)

Dear Les,

Thank you for organizing! I am happy to hear you are well!! I heard it has been extremely cold! How is your little Gemma doing?

I am ok. Honestly, London is just not a city for me, so although I am over the initial shock and sadness of leaving what was home, I still can't say I enjoy it here or really anticipate that ever being an option. But the good thing is is that I have the strength now to work, and to work towards being able to leave.

Sending you love

xx

HI [REDACTED]! All good with me and I am truly hoping all good with YOU...! Hoping you are settling in and starting to enjoy your new adventures.
We have apartments available around March 10. I am not sure if Jeffrey will be in town or not then...we will have to wait and see. I will email Moshe directly to keep organizing simple! Take care, Lesley

Subject: NYC visit, weekend of March 10

[REDACTED],

How are things going? I saw some of the bad press a month or so ago.
I hope it wasn't too bad on your end.

A few friends and I are planning another weekend in nyc, around March 10th.

- 1) You think Jeff might be around and interested in chatting, by chance?
- 2) Might there be apartments available for us to utilize again can, by chance?
- 3) Might you be in town and interested in coffee, or a drink?

-Moshe
