Thank you...I do think a proof first is a better idea too! I would =ate to print the whole thing and him want to change the =oloring/contrast or something like that. If we could get the proofs =omorrow, that would be great, he can see them on Saturday and if he is happy with everything, we can print the 8'x8' next =eek.

I do think a proof would be =est. I had not built that cost into the quote, thinking we'd be =roducing the whole piece tomorrow.

For the proof what would =ork best is to do a proof of the entire image scaled down, and then =rint a segment of the image at 100% to show image =uality.

I'll get this info over to =roduction and get back to you with an additional cost. Let me know if =ou need anything else. Thanks.

Thank you..

Do you think it's best to do a proof first that we could have for =omorrow, then he can approve that over the weekend and we can print the ='x8' next week?

What size do you usually do for a proof?
