Hi Gustavo,

We just spoke on the phone regarding meeting next week to review the work I need done in my apt. Attached is a photo of what I need done. I need a new unit made to cover the radiator and AC in my living room. I have the design idea already. I'd like to lift the height of this so it comes out at the same level as the window sill, it will need to have 3 grates going across to let in the heat that are removable to access the radiator and AC. I would like the AC to have a nicer enclosure because when I use the AC, I have to take the grate off for the air to circulate better and I'd like it to look decent when the grate is off as well. I want to use a white Caesar stone(or white Zodiaq) for the top piece and the rest just a white lacquer. I also thought perhaps there could be small drawers on the top part above the radiator and AC to utilize the empty space there.

I also have a friend in the same building as mine who wants her cover replaced as well. Her apt is just like mine, so perhaps you could have a look at hers as well when you come over.

My address is [REDACTED] on the corner of [REDACTED] I am in the city all weekend and next week, so please let me know when a good time to meet is. Thanks!
