I have tried to e mail you several times. I have had the perfect computer problems - a virus that shut my whole system and an abundance of returned mail! Anyway, I have wanted to drop you line to say that I was sad that you could not make it to the Island, but fortunately there is still a lot of treasure to unearth so your services, and those of your daughter, are still needed. A promise is a promise so hopefully I will see you there soon. Also I look forward to talking computers and cameras w/you. I have recently been introduced to a real digital expert (he was given to me by one of the guys at Disney imaginering) and I am making slow but deliberate progress. The progress is in understanding the technology and in learning how to use it!
