Jeffrey,

I want to introduce you to Fiorenzo. Fiorenzo runs the SilkLab at Tufts (<http://ase.tufts.edu/biomedical/unolab/home.html>) and he's also a friend of Joi. I went to visit the lab yesterday and it's quite impressive (eg: you can "wrap" bio fluids into silk and they are reserved for a long time. You can also inject "prisms" made of silk into a human/animal body to augment reflection if you're trying to take an image of that body part - again, quite amazing).

Anyway, Fiorenzo is also potentially thinking about starting a company based on his work. He's going to be in NYC either from Wednesday night or Thursday morning and then he's taking off on Friday

Fio,

Jeffrey is a friend of Joi as well and he loves science. Among other things, he runs a foundation that helped a lot of scientists work on their research (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Jeffrey_Epstein_VI_Foundation). Even if his background is in finance, he is pretty well-read on various scientific fields/topics - so I think he'd love to hear the underlying details of your research.
