Dear Brian,

I am assuming your clients are after the panels that are on the ceiling in the Haus Tambaran at the Met. These are made on Sago palm and I do have a few pieces. They are not in great shape. However the panels are easy to get as they still use them. It would just take time to get them here. An elderly man called David from the village paints them. David does good work. I will attach photo of several photos of David's panels I put in a show and sale in Berkeley recently. Unfortunately/fortunately they all sold. I could ask David to make 30 panels. It might be better to give the measurements of the area to be covered as the panels vary in size.

There is also a younger man called Nania who does beautiful paintings and I will include a few pictures of his that he painted on cardboard. He can also do the panels. Nania knows all the stories behind the paintings and can write them down.

It would take about 6 months to get the panels to the USA. They would cost you approx $200 each depending on the freight.

I hope this is of help.

Best
