S= that cool test pilot (& green card) opportunity just fell through bec=use of 'my past'... The owner said he didn't care and had an offer letter =eady but his lawyer got involved and said he couldn't risk bad press with =e since he is trying to buy an airport and is in the public eye. Ahh, I'm =ot sure what to do about this anymore... I'm great at what I do, had amazi=g references and the interview could not have gone better. It's getting re=lly hard to support myself when every interesting opportunity falls throug= because of this. It's an endless cycle - I put an effort into something, =et opportunities and then watch them all disappear over and over again (pi=ot work, conference sponsors, speaking engagements, TV shows, business par=nerships, personal connections) I stopped telling you because I know you c=n't control the press and what's on the internet but I'm at a loss about w=at else to do or how to get around the fact that the bad press seems to tr=mp any effort, skill and reality for most people. Any new brilliant soluti=ns or ideas?
