U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Warren (D-Mass.) has become a risin= star in the Democratic Party through her focus on economic and social is=ues, triggering calls for her to run for president. Less is known about=her views on Israel, but two recent moves may shed light on her outlook=2E Warren was one of four Democrats on the Senate Banking Committee to vote=against the latest bipartisan Iran sanctions, and was also not among th= 75 senators to sign a letter stating that the senators would not support=foreign aid to the Palestinian Authority until the Obama administration r=views the PA's unilateral bid to join the International Criminal Co=rt. "The best place for the pro-Israel community to be is in a plac= where they have bipartisan support. ... I would hope that Senator W=rren would return to the bipartisan consensus position in the future,&r=quo; said Tevi Troy, who served as White House liaison to the Jewish co=munity under President George W. Bush. Read the full story here.

Forget pollsters. These days, to get a sense of an Is=aeli politician's popularity, the place to go is his or her Faceb=ok and YouTube video portals. Whether it be the Likud party's "ibi-sitter" ad, the Zionist Union's animated video about its=socialist economic platform, or a vignette casting Jewish Home leader N=ftali Bennett in the role of a Tel Aviv hippie, more and more politicia=s and political parties are promoting their respective brands with viral=videos ahead of Israel's March 17 election. What is a Jewish film? In 2011, Tablet Magazine toppe= its "100 Greatest Jewish Films" list with the surprising choic= of "E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial," the story of the little a=ien who made Cindy Sher fall in love with movies in the first place. Acco=ding to Tablet, the "E.T." themes of home, love, family=2C friendship, and enchantment make it a beautiful choice for the quint=ssential Jewish movie. Any film professor worth her salt would find it gr=at food for thought to think about what makes a film Jewish or even what=makes a decent film in general, but the joy of movies doesn't hav= to be proven like a mathematical equation, writes Sher, the executiv= editor of Chicago's JUF News.
