Hey =ich,

I was surprised on Petes email to me,. It was =uite snippy,.

I guess Pete doesn't understand how =o negotiate,. He took it to personal.,

I don't =hink he's getting a kickback from Brian, I would hope not,. Since i =rust Pete,, he has to understand, I certainly don't trust Brian, or =ven know him., don't understand if Brian really got an offer to sell =or $52k, why didn't he jump on that from CRS?

I'll let you know what Pete responds to the $52k =ffer

I'll keep you posted

Thx

Larry

Rich appears Brian is a friend of Pete,, and Pete believes that =RS offered $52k for the parts,, Pete does not want to offer the money, =ete informs deal is off.

See email trail below:

I will let Brian know, but deal is off, tired =f wasting his time, and mine.

Why would =nyone take a lower offer, when they had a higher one?

Friendship is why he held off selling till =ow.

Cut short,
We can't tie up space for 3 or 4 days to have a tire change. Exchange is what we should need to do. Exchange is probably double the O/H cost, each time.

I am not going to offer anything less than the 52K that was offered by CJS. Their offer is still open.

I don't want to waste any more of Brian's time. He agreed to the higher offer, and included the jack pads for me.

55K, or I will let Brian know the deal is off. I am not getting anything from this, called in a favor from a friend. He has no reason to not accept the 52K offer from JS.

You could always sell off some of the assets, without any timeframe issue.

Regards

I will let Brian know, but deal is off, tired of wasting his time, and fine.

Why would anyone take a lower offer, when they had a higher one?

Friendship is why he held off selling till now.

CJS buys and sells parts . They will put =hese in there exchange pool. You may end up going exchange with these =nits down the road if you don't buy them. The mains require O/H at each =ire change

Hi Larry,

Valiant =s looking to put money in the coffers, that is why they sold the =550.

They took a big stock drop recently, and have had other =ssues financially.

They =ropped the price to 16.5M for s/n 5063(?). Low s/n, and Brian was =fraid that the deal would fall through when 5173 dropped to =6.7M

I don't think that they will wait much longer, and won't go =elow the 55K offer.

Hi Larry,

Answer is no from Valiant.

They still have an offer from Corporate Jet Support of 52K =or the wheels.

For $55K, the jack pads are included.

Meridian just purchased a set of pads for $2,500.

Main wheels are about 40K, nose are 15K (each) new.

That doesn't include the tires and mounting them.

Again, a good price in my opinion, but it won't =ast.

Regards,

Pete
