I prefer two top stitch vertical lines as it has a better visual relationship with the end arms- although a perimeter stitch would also work well.

The doors are 38" long by 14" high with two latch on each door.

Below is an Hermes couch with the bottom cushion stitched. What about doing that around the perimeter of the doors?

Additionally I attached a crude line drawing.

I don't want to over adorn it. My preference is to add just a simple single stitch. It keep its light and complimentary to the end arms.

Either that or we could do a top single stitch around the perimeter of the doors. Same stitch that's on your divan end arms and single seat end arms.
