Not fixed would be c=rrect, better to say, not operating correctly, one pump is only needed to t=ansfer Aux tank fuel, before FAA mandated Circuit protection we operated tw= pumps in Aux tanks to Transfer,

Monday I'm h=ving Neil from Banyan work with Larry Morrison to check wiring, =div>Morrison and Peter Swift from Quite Wing think its possible there is an=internal leak inside tank and plumbing that causes one pump to Cavitate whe= both pumps are selected on / only in flight.

It doesn't ma=e sense why system is operating normal on ground, and in flight we get at l=ast one pump Low PSI light on.

The only difference with gro=nd operation is fuel demand from Engines at high power. Or sensitivity of U= protection circuit box again.

The tanks h=ve to be removed July of this year for lower fuselage inspection. in order t= check internal plumbing, tanks have to be removed according to Morrison al=o.

Great schedule, thx.,

B=ll Hammond departs for Singapore Today, he'll return mid February.

Currently I'm Having morning Coffee poolside at "Casa Echo V=ctor" /
Casa EV. A house this large deserves a name!&=bsp;

B727 training:

Dave, Chris Hi=gins and myself will attend B727 recurrent training in Miami, due to FAR125= we have to attend every 6months. I'll schedule January 11th and 12th=at PanAm in Miami.

I feel more comfortable with AUX tanks, since any one pump works in AUX system. This gives me good redundancy.

Is Jan 11th and 12th for B727 class ok for Dave, Chris and I?

Thx,
Larry
