Jeffrey,

I am certainly glad that you h=ve thick skin and care little about what the press says. I am sorry =hat you have to appear tolerant against intolerance.

<=iv>From all appearances, you fulfill the challenge of Kipling when he said=

"If you ca= talk with crowds and keep your virtue, Or walk with Kings - nor lose the common touch, If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you, =div style="text-align:center">If all men count with you, but none too mu=h."

In spite of outward appearances, I know very few know how you r=ally feel and I can only hope that that feeling is shown best in the namin= of your airplane.

Jerru
