Leslie,

It seems that the hotel residences are much more expansive than rental properties.

Below is one example.

Dear Natalie:

Thank you for thinking of us for your friend's needs in January. I would have a couple options for your friend. The best option is if they can make three different one bedroom suites then they would get more space and a better price. I only have two 3 bedrooms and six 2 bedrooms at Central Park and that is why they are expensive.

3 bedrooms suite (which is actually a one bedroom connecting to a two bedroom suite three full baths and three kings beds two kitchens. The rate would be $1500 per night plus taxes total for 21 days is roughly $37,000

2 bedroom suite has a king and one double bed located on the 15th or 16th floor would be $1200 per night plus taxes roughly $30,000 per night

Deluxe 1 bedroom suite (on floors 3 to 9) would be 600 sq ft and would be at the rate of $325 per night plus taxes which comes out to roughly $8,000 for 21 days

Premium 1 bedroom suite (on floors 10 to 16) would be about 800 sq ft and would be at the rate of $445 per night plus taxes which comes out to roughly $11,000 for 21 days

Please note that we are a non smoking building and all the rates above are quoted with housekeeping service offer once a week. Additional housekeeping service is available at additional costs.

Please see the attached sell sheet for the building describing the services that we offer.

Sincerely,

Jeffrey D. Piot
