greg, google told you we don't agree to your demands, period. if you consider that means you walked away, it is emblematic of problems ahead, they also have no commitment to invest your project is great, you are great, your analysis is goofy. I would like to see you succeed, =C2♦ get out of your own way

Google didn't walk away. I did. They are still investing. It was a tough decision, but I did it.

Elon is in (or says he is) talk with him often. Frankly he got the huge bid=from Nasa and that took all of spacex attention.

I am focusing on closing with Qualcomm. Is it the best deal I could get? No= However it is a very good deal and its not just about the money. The QC deal still gives me significant upside and takes me out of worrying about successive rounds and financing. Meanwhile we get to focus on building this stem. (It is really awesome and will solve some real problems) your plan is great , your financial involvement is suicidal. .=C2♦ I would suggest again that you not do it. you are young and have a bright future k too many people annoyed is not in your interest, wild exaggerations of value, control , have now caused google to walk away, then elon,♦=A0 I am your friend, even if qualcomm comes in , the money you actually get should be important , focusin on no dilution is silly, in real terms,=C2♦ it means little.
