Hey,

I'd like to say "thank you" for taking the time out of your busy schedule to steer me on what I like to call the "right map".

I'd like to tell you a little about myself even if it may be irrelevant at this point.

I've made some good choices over the course of my life in terms of financials:

Decent savings: [REDACTED]

IRA's/Stocks: [REDACTED]

TSP(retirement so far accumulated) [REDACTED]

Checking(my everyday spending): [REDACTED]

Credit score: [REDACTED]

And it goes on, how ever, i realize even though all that is ok, I'm NEVER going to save my way into financial freedom. This is what led to learn about money and how it actually works and how to "grow it". Realized tax structure, inflation, interest rates, type of investment vehicle along with the knowledge played a KEY role, and this is what started that burning desire and I can not seem to turn it off now. I've been extremely cautious of who I take advice from. I strongly believe if someone has not been to Coney Island, they can "not" show me how to get to Coney Island. So I began to read books on wealth, so my philosophy is intact. I'm in action mode right now and have dedicated everyday to getting there. I only take advice from you and every time we speak i take every thing literal and go out and do it. I know this is the COST I must endure to get where I want to get and I will "never" give up.

Right now I'm just focusing on the numbers like you said, accounting aspect and will enroll in the accounting course you suggested and will continue to do so everyday. It keeps me up!

Sorry for being long winded, just wanted to let you know. "Thanks again"
