This month our F1000Reports journals published a pair of open access articles that argue opposing sides of the debate on whether protein recognition can occur in the absence of stable structure. The articles, written by leaders in the field, have clear implications for protein engineering.

 Following a successful beta-phase, F1000Research has launched a new site, hosted on a new platform, with a new color.

In addition, articles published in F1000Research that receive the appropriate level of review will now be listed in PubMed and deposited within PubMed Central.
