Hi... need some guidance.. We weren't able to get the cash for our house in Australia transferred before the exchange rate dropped well below .87 USD per AUD. It is now around .8-.81. We have $425K AUD here.. want to transfer eventually here to invest and also pay own some fraction of our US mortgage. Not in an urgent rush. Suggestions? I think the money is earning 4% or so in USD while it sits there... Should we move it and take the -0% hit since Nov on the exchange rate, keep it there looking for an uptick, move it to some other intermediate currency that may use?

Sorry, but I have no real understanding of what option might be best, and this is your area.. thanks for any advice, which will not be held against you later either way.. :)

p.s. spoke to the woman who I think would make an amazing =exec. Director for Origins Project as we ramp up.. you would like her. =nbsp;we'll see.
