Dear Friends and Neighbors,

A tropical storm is developing in the western Caribbean and is expected to bring heavy rains and wind to South Florida this weekend. Weather forecasters are predicting heavy rainfall and winds for our area on Saturday into early Sunday.

In Miami Beach, we may experience localized flooding from this storm system. Please understand that even in improved areas, if we are hit with a severe "rain bomb," in conjunction with the seasonal high tide, it may take longer for even improved streets to drain. We will make sure that we have generators on stand-by until the permanent generators are installed.

The city's stormwater improvement program is still underway, with approximately 15% of the system completed. In the lowest-lying areas that are not yet improved, the city's public works department has installed temporary water pumps and temporary water dams to prevent and reduce flooding.

My office will continue to monitor the storm's development and will keep you updated. Please take the necessary precautions to secure your property and stay safe in anticipation for the foul weather in the days to come.

Sincerely,

Philip Levine
Mayor of Miami Beach
