Despite owing part of its existence to the United Nations, Israel has experienced decades of bias from an institution whose stated mission includes trying to ensure international goodwill and world peace. Yet the nascent Trump administration, under the leadership of Ambassador to the U.N. Nikki Haley, is trying to chart a new course for the world body's culture on Israel. The Israeli government claims it is already witnessing Haley's positive influence in the international arena. "Ambassador Haley and the Trump administration have changed the rules of the game at the U.N., and the results have reverberated throughout the organization," Israeli Ambassador to the U.N. Danny Danon told JNS.org.

The anti-Semitism scandal surrounding the British Labour Party returned this week when the party announced it is merely renewing the suspension of former London Mayor Ken Livingstone, rather than expelling him outright for the vile falsehoods he promoted when he claimed Hitler had supported Zionism before he "went mad" and launched the Holocaust. Labour's disturbing behavior is reflected not just in the party's deny-and-excuse response to anti-Semitism at home, but in its adoption of a similar stance towards human rights abuses abroad. Livingstone has been an enabler of evil, writes JNS.org columnist Ben Cohen.

Anti-Israel activists gathered Sunday inside the Hyatt Regency McCormick Place in Chicago to hear a discussion featuring convicted Palestinian terrorist Rasmeah Odeh. Unbeknownst to Odeh and the attendees of the Jewish Voice for Peace conference, while she was receiving a standing ovation, a memorial service for her victims was in progress just a few floors above.
