Subject: Your Google Storage plan is set to automatically renew in 3 days

This is our final reminder that your one-year Google Storage plan for jeeva=ation@gmail.com is set to automatically renew in 3 days. Unless you take a=tion, we'll automatically charge your Google Wallet account on Apr 9, 2013=

Since you purchased this plan before April 24, 2012 - the date we =pdated our Google Storage plans - and have set your plan to automatically =enew, remember that you can keep your current plan. It's not too late to d=cide whether you want to keep your current plan, purchase a new plan, or d=wngrade to free storage.

Keep your current plan

To keep your cur=ent plan and avoid an interruption in service, please check that your paym=nt information is current before your plan expires. Read how to update you= payment information <<http://support.google.com/drive/bin/answer.py?answer=2474013>> in Google Wallet.

We'll continue to automa=ically renew your current Google Storage plan each year, providing you wit= the same storage limits for your Gmail, Drive, and Picasa, as long as you= account's status is as follows:

- Current plan hasn't been changed=at google.com/settings/storage <<http://www.google.com/settings/storage>>
- Account is active
- Annual plan is set to automatically=renew each year
- Google Wallet payment information is up-to-date Purchase a new plan Visit www.google.com/settings/storage <<http://www.google.com/settings/storage>> to purchase a new plan before yo=r current plan expires. After you purchase a new plan, you won't be able t= go back to your current plan.

Downgrade to free storage

Visit <= <http://www.google.com/settings/storage>">www.google.com/settings/s=orage to downgrade to free storage. After you downgrade your plan, you=won't be able to go back to your current plan.
