I am very upset. I didn't lie and cheat and lead you on knowing I would never give you what you wanted. I participated in your life, your idea of fun, I accepted your lifestyle, I stood by you for years of legal battles and jail time. ( Why don't you read our emails during the time you actually went to jail ) I never said a bad word about you behind your back, there was nobody you could trust more or who loved you more. I've been perfect. All I wanted was more time with you, closer relationship and a family with you. I watched you in embarrassment for years introduce me to people as just another name in the line of your "friends", make fun of me behind my back, have other girlfriends, buy other people houses, cars, watches, luggage and jewelry and I never asked for the same. You promised me a baby, time alone, real estate broker deals, apartment in Prague, castle in Slovakia, house in Florida, cars, plane and did nothing. You ignored my birthdays, picked on me about the pettiest of errands and even took back a used car you gave me with a bow on it for Xmas with an excuse that you didn't really give it to me. I thank you for the nice times we had and letting me learn to fly. Although that was already towards the end when I needed something I enjoyed while you were spending months with [REDACTED] and others in the office. I lived your life and catered to you for years and you make me sound like a monster for 'nagging' about spending quality time with you. Yes, I feel taken advantage of.

I don't want to have a friendship with you that you have with all your ex-girlfriends. I know you. I've been listening to you mock them, share intimate details about them, not respect their privacy, parade your new girls in front of them when they want to talk to You, lie to them about their partners affairs, embarrass them when they ask you for help, sleep with their friends, sisters or daughters. I can't handle that and I can't trust you not to do it. As heartbreaking as finding myself in a position with nothing to lose is, it is also quite liberating. I hope you are happy with your decisions and find whatever it is you are looking for.

I want to collect my things from your houses or have them sent and I'd like you to propose what you think is a fair arrangement moving forward. I want you to take Ball-e. I can't have her.
