CELEBRATING COMMUNITY
Healing the Hamptons
August 2010

DONNA'S VOICE

Culture is defined and reflected by community. This sense of community is beautifully illustrated in our Summer Brochure. Russell James, photographer and friend, captures not only the outer beauty of the women wearing Urban Zen, but also the cultural soul of the women and their heritage. Entering the Urban Zen store - where there is a diverse selection of products from hand-crafted Senegalese accessories to Balinese furniture made by craftsmen from fallen teak - is experiencing a new sense of community where culture, fashion and philanthropy mesh.

The Hamptons is a part of my community. Thirteen years ago, I reached out to the fashion community to come together and raise funding for ovarian cancer by creating "Super Saturday" in the Hamptons. My dear friend Liz Tilberis and I started Super Saturday thirteen years ago when Liz was diagnosed with ovarian cancer. I can't tell you how moving it is for me to bring the fashion community together and be embraced by the Hamptons community for such an important purpose.

This year is even more poignant with the first Urban Zen tent and my personal commitment to healing the Hamptons. I am pleased to continue our close partnership with Rodney Yee, Colleen Saidman Yee and Yoga Shanti. They will be on hand at Super Saturday with many of the Urban Zen Integrative Therapists (UZITs) to offer their skills to our guests. And now, I'm thrilled to include Southampton Hospital as part of the Urban Zen community. Our UZITs have been volunteering their integrative skills in the hospital's dialysis and ambulatory departments. Ellen's Run, another great Hampton's summer event, also brings together the community to help raise funds for Southampton Hospital's Ellen Hermanson Breast Center.

Please stop by and be a part of our community.

COMMUNICATE

Community is no longer a geographical place, thanks to the internet. Our online community, Share Your Voice, offers a "place" where we can all get connected and be a part of a community where all are welcomed. We want to hear what "community" means to you. Is belonging to a community important for well-being? How can we grow our community so others can connect and belong? How can we improve our communities at home and on the internet?

COMMUNITY HIGHLIGHTS

On August 21, the Ellen Hermanson Foundation hosts its annual fundraiser to support its commitment to helping breast cancer patients and their families cope with the changing nature of the physical and emotional aspects of breast cancer. This year, Urban Zen Foundation is proud to share that Donna Karan will be honored at the benefit for her work in integrative medicine. It is a privilege for her to share that honor with Steven Klein and Hope Klein Langer. Funds raised will benefit the

Ellen Hermanson Breast Center at Southampton Hospital. Join the 5K run on the next day, August 22, to support the center and many breast health programs at the hospital. Learn more, donate, and join the run at www.ellensrun.org
