The technique employed is most likely the same. I will be able to know how to best dissolve the existing finish. I could pick up the sample around 10 am. Thanks.

Hi Serafin, yes that should be possible. Do you know what time you are thinking? I will co-ordinate with Richard so he can hand it to you. The thing is though it isn't a good ex of the actual finish of most of the wood, this seems to have been glazed quite heavily whereas most of it has not.

I understand there is an existing sample similar to the finish.

If I could pick that up in NY tomorrow, I could determine what it will take to make the markings of the wood more visible in advance of the site visit.

Let me know if this is possible.

Thank you.
