I think I'll go and try them on at the store first and then send you photos of a few different options- I'll be more successful that way given that I'm a bit tricky to fit. I'll try to squeeze in a visit to the mall tomorrow morning here in Houston, otherwise will make a trip down to SLC next week.

My mentor in life and in fashion...Thank you!!! ;)

Lunch was a success- I have begun the formal partnership process with CDM and now CH2MHill. Both co's were ready to sign on the dotted line immediately- they were drooling over the hope of working with us.

I forget to mention it today but "the ring" is apparently being made and will be done in a month!!!! Poor Porter is so frazzled about his work situation that he forwarded me an email I was not supposed to see. Knowing him, he'll probably sit on it until December.

I've been looking at suits online and agree that Jcrew may have the best selection...

The latest update is that I've created a position for Porter and it has been approved by our upper management. It'll put him in front of every major player in the waste and water world...I'm just waiting for his decision on whether he's going to take it (I only offered it to him today). The only downside is that it's a 6 mo. position and it's unpaid so he's grappling with what that means for now. He recognizes that the upside is huge and I'm fairly confident he'll take it, I just think he just needs a few days to digest.

I'm on my way down to Houston for the week where I'll be meeting with Waste Management and Allied/Republic about a few composting projects we're working with them to develop. I have my pearls and new suit in check for their trial run. I'll let you know how they are received.
