Jeff,

This is the picture we hope to obtain.

Your science site, which is rigourous, contains positive testimonials about you, etc. we would like to at least get second ranking. It will be hard to move off the Wikipedia immediately, but it can eventually be done. I don't know about your guy who thinks it is worthless, but the people I have talked to, and who know you well, and two of them are in your inner circle, think it is great. So.... If it isn't there, you just have trash.

The sports site will be number three.

Charity site will be number four

Cool stuff will be number five

International moneyman of mystery will stay

The rest of the bad articles on the front page will move off that page.

Hairplant doctor will stay.

We are now pushing the other Jeffrey Epsteins up in rankings to take over the bad articles on page two, so that they disappear.

Leaving the Edge article.

Same thing with Page 3, 4, 5, and 6.

If it is the financial people you are most concerned with, then, what they will be most concerned with is that you can make them money. They don't give a shit about anything else. You make them money, you could be convicted of far worse, and they wouldn't care two cents, so how about a site that is a testimony to how you are successful in making money....because the financiers will not care that you are supportive of science. We can do that too, and get that right to the top.

That's all they care about, they are coin operated, don't you agree?
