Wikipedia Entry:

Cazenove is a British stockbroker, founded in 1823 by Philip Cazenove. Although the firm refuses to comment on its relations to the Royal Family, it is widely assumed that it is the appointed stockbroker to Her Majesty The Queen.[1] Until recently, it was one of the UK's last independent investment banks and one of the last to remain a private partnership. The Partnership was well-known for its 'blue-blooded' reputation and its complete aversion to publicity, but it was one of the most successful brokers and corporate advisers in London.
