Let me check about the manager for the island. As I understand you need him/her to leave there full time, correct? Does he need to have any cooking or other specific skills beside being a good manager? I am also having lunch on Monday with a woman that specializes in training house staff in terms of etiquette and protocol (she worked for several families in Europe and royalty in Bahrain). I remember you wanted someone who can train by European standards.

Hi Jeffrey,

How are you and how is your search for your homes go? Please let me know what you are looking for in particular and if I cannot help I will be happy to recommend someone as I have done quite a lot of networking in the industry.

I have been working on my site, still not completely done, but I think it covers well the general meaning, especially consulting part that I want to do most. Would appreciate your thoughts on that:

I am looking for new clients as I am almost done with putting JP's homes in order, and we are finishing a big construction project so in a month I will have less income from him. I am very good at what I describe on the site (and JP will always be happy to give me best references).

Thanks,
Dasha
