saw the wood samples, one of them is pretty good, sarah took some pictures that she'll send along as my camera wasn't shooting properly. the process is the light stain, light shellac and light wax, the tone you'll see is a warm honey.

i think it'll probably work. the key is to keep the grain as an integral element in the finish.

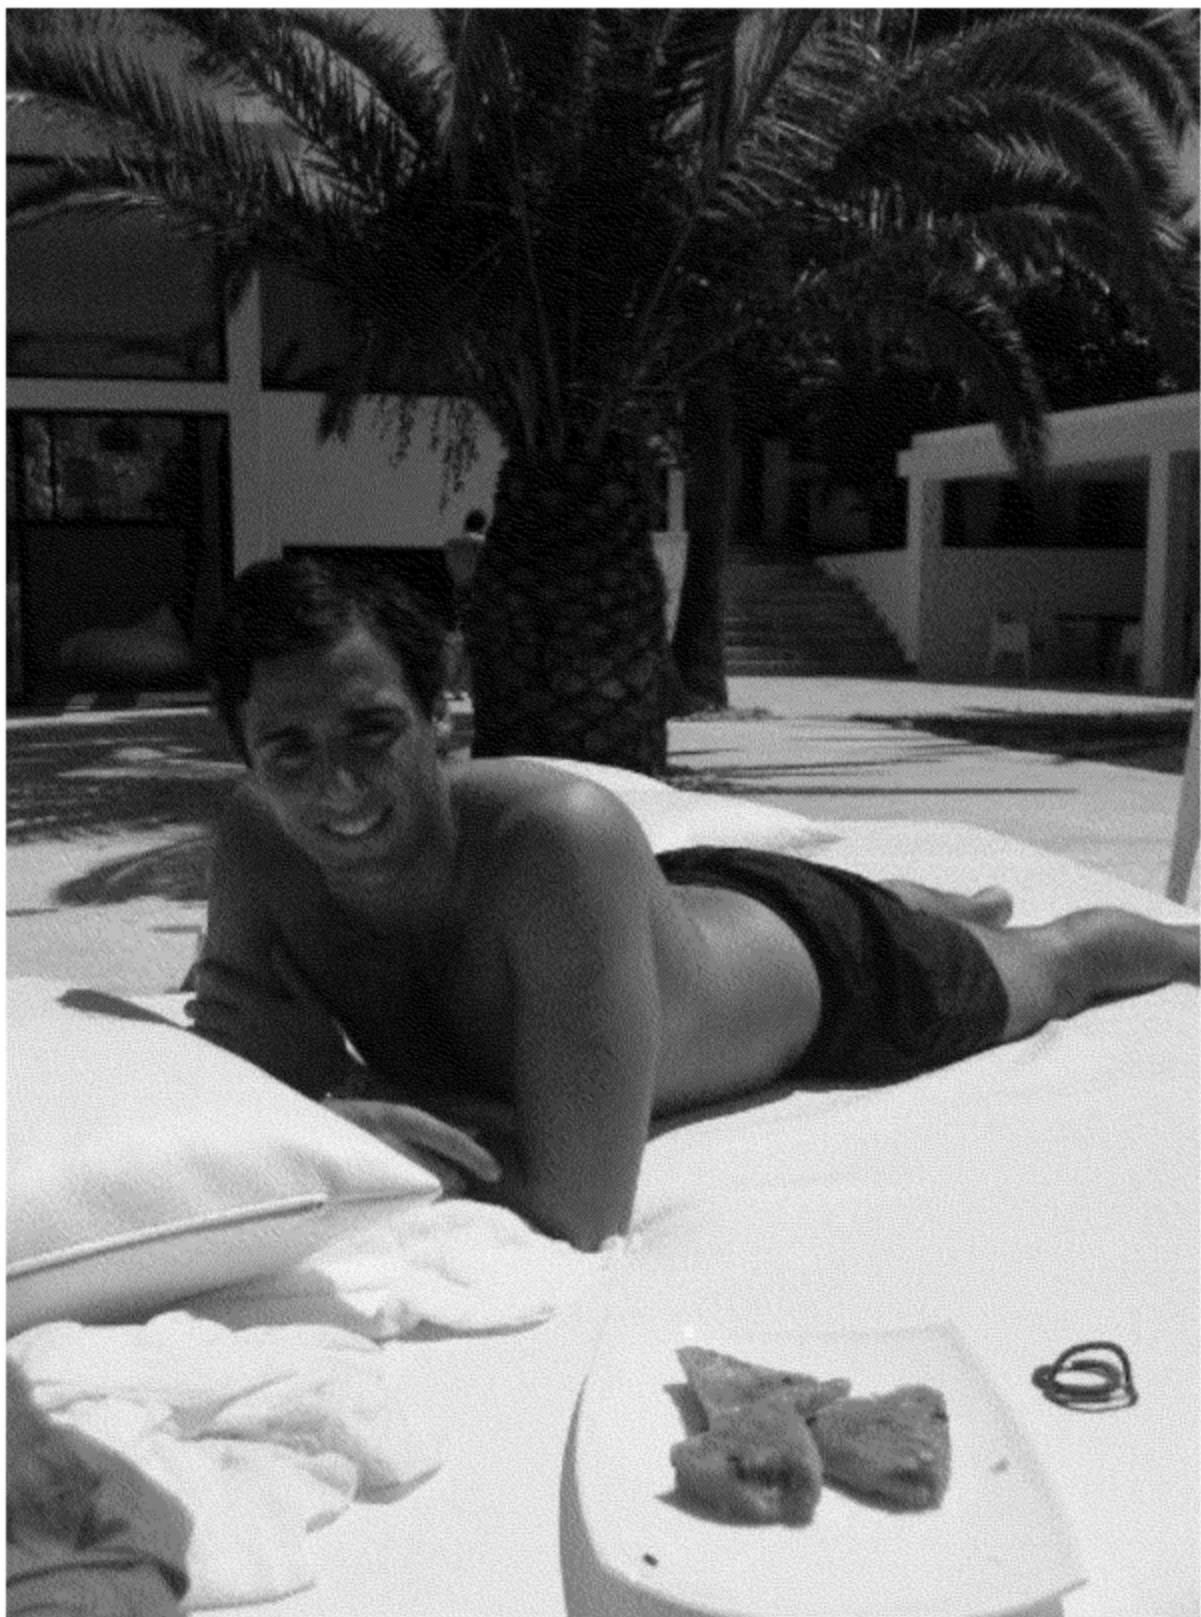

we went to Taiping as well and selected a series of samples that we lined up the stairs. think i found the right carpet for the entrance way, it is like the one you liked, but a shade different, v serene and makes the entrance way feel Asian which in comparison to the opulence of the hallway is rather nice.

how's your day? ... know your plan yet?

spoke to [REDACTED] who sounds ok but nervous, be nice if you emailed her your well wishes : [REDACTED] here's a picture of her sweet bf! (he's not from Israel is he :)) she's very funny, said he's now officially her boyfriend - pretty good timing no!
