Oh, another email from you...and again it's about how [REDACTED] didn't do something the way you imagined. I am sorry, I don't want to live like this anymore. I don't want to stay in this land where Jeffrey rules the world and [REDACTED] is the villain. She does nothing right, doesn't deserve to be treated with kindness and respect, it's alright to simply tell her you will leave her behind on the first trip in 2 years, it's ok to then wake her up at 4am tell her to go pack, leave your house and stay away again, it's ok to nag and complain endlessly because she used the wrong words to ask a question or served coffee after takeoff not during, ignore her efforts until she is completely brainwashed to just sit home, shut up, rub feet and forget what she likes to do and learn. I miss me and this is not it. I am not 16 anymore and I don't want to find myself in this situation with you 10 years from now. The stress of having the person you love constantly remind you and exaggerate your flaws, mistakes and inferiority with nothing positive to balance it out is unbearable and my body obviously can't handle it. I look sick, i don't feel well. This relationship has become unhealthy.
