Subject: Main house arches

I believe that the existing arches on the main house are the right size and proportion as they relate to the architecture but the columns are not. What do you think about leaving the arches as is, but replace the fluted columns with a smooth colonial style? If we did this, we would save an incredible amount of time and expense and it would look great. We could simply form a new column around the existing ones.

Let me know if you want me to do a quick sketch of this concept.
