Hey Jeffrey,

So I am finally feeling better today, Woopee! Today I will be shipping your fabric! Aren't you excited, hehe! I found out I only have 1 day left I can take off for the entire year, WTF, that sucks!!!! What am I to do? Ahhh!!!! I feel trapped....

I was thinking more and more about the massage school here in the city... I'm still thinking it is a great idea, thinking I will learn a lot and be able to pursue more in the field once that is complete... but 16 months, wooweee! But at least I could work full-time and attend school all at once (and have absolutely, no life)... hmmm... What about studying in NJ? The requirements are half what the city offers and Aveda has a school out there... But it's closer to Philadelphia... and what would I do for work? Ahhh!!! Why are things so complicated? I remember how you were saying physical therapy will start being covered by health plans... Here is a stat about massage therapy. "Approximately 25 million Americans make 60 million visits to massage practitioners each year. Due to such a growing demand for massage therapy, many health plans are now beginning to cover massage for rehabilitation and prevention of illness." I looked into the whole physical therapy idea, but I'll be so old by the time I complete the program... like in my 30's, shit!

I don't know Jeffrey...

Help! :-)))))))))

Hope you're well.. xoxo miss ya!
