All I asked him was where are the sandals and could he find them. So rude.
Problem is that while he gives me nothing, he doesn't demand much apart from money and lodging. Not sure there are many co-pilots around at my time of life. Hardly people queuing up and current photos looking very puffy.

i'm sorry----but as you enter the springtime of your senility , i think you are in need of a co-pilot , to help fly and navigate through ever more uncertain weather , rather than a eternal passenger, who continues to bring on just one more carry -on. and complains about the lack of space, quality of the journey, and smell of the loo.

Had a real bust up with R this morning and now heading off for Corfu. He is self-obsessed, absorbed by whatever is absorbing him, unable to accomodate me or anything else at that time. He said he needed 500 pounds for household needs. Why doesn't he go out and earn some? Am I going to face this for rest of my life?
