Title: Re: I applied here: http://escience.washington.edu/ - they are cool because they get the technical aspects (many people think they can just pontificate about sociology or communications), but was told a missed the first round of interview. Bad but I am trying to salvage it. The only other real app I have made is Michigan: http://www.si.umich.edu/ and we will see. I am about to put an app into Harvard stats but realistically I am too far away for serious quantitative work at the moment, although that is changing.

Gelernter and Brockman this academia isn't necessarily the right place for me – havent seen a better offer yet though.

Did Gelernter talk to you at all about our ideas for creating collaboration in computational research? Very exciting.
