my personal new favorite is that reality is nature's notation. like musical notation, it is the playing that is the root of the experience. . . notations = are open to interpretations. . . each instrument plays from the same music notation but has its own tones and resonances. . . we see things (notation), our instrument (brain =), plays it for us. looking at the instrument=and how it is made , tells you nothing about the music it is designed to play or what that music sounds like
