I will look up the video and I agree with every point you make </=iv> But we agree - I think- that scientism is mi=leading and can be dangerous.

Science cannot explain experience including =he experience of doing science Science cannot explain consciousness </=iv> Science is an activity in consciousness = Theories are conceived in consciousness = Experiments are designed in consciousness&nb=p; Observations are made in consciousness =/div> Consciousness is the ontological primitive n=t matter Matter is the experience of sensations and s=nse perceptions in consciousness . It does not exist as such ! Consciousness must be included in expanded s=iience even though there is no equation for it I'm off to lecture Wishing you a joyful day

Yes sir! You said it when we first met
Science is one language in consciousness

There are other languages consciousness uses - art music poetry love d=light pleasure joy and of course suffering as well

Consciousness is life
