Dear Dr Moscovitz

A schoolmate of mine had a stroke 3 years ago and now he is at home partly paralyzed, has a feeding tube and is bed ridden. He has gained some hand movements and at times can pull the bed cover with his left hand. He also recognized me when I visited him and smiled as if he was trying to talk.

Is there a treatment or rehabilitation center for such patients and what are the success chances that he will improve at least to speak and eat by himself? Attached are some reports for reference.

Thanks
