From:	jeffrey E. <jeevacation@gmail.com>
Sent:	Sunday, April 22, 2018 6:10 PM
To:	Brad S Karp

i dont want to embarass alan, and get in a contest i= which leon pits me against him then blames you. i=e seen this movie before. Ithat think a written ex=lanation should suffice, Leon will try to avoid the issue of p=yment and take out his frustration on one of us. it is a=misdirection . that usually works. . the &qu=t; you should have known" he will attempt to ignore=tens of emails laying out the time line and details and my contempor=anious notes of conversations sent to him. . =IT is clear by repeated emails , that our original deal resulted in a paym=nt that i knew he wouldnt make, we had agreed 50 % of phaidon.=C2 my numbers were always the same. alternate ways of payin= it were discussed and presented. he said he and wechsle= needed the details. and no worry we would deal with the payment aft=r. . my contention is that after the transaaction was complete=and only after did he say , no your number is wrong. his position is=" he said he never agreed to it." so he is not bound, =A0 i said you cant take a work , knowing the price, keep it, a=d then say ill only pay 33 % , because brad an i think it the right number= . . All easy ,

--

--94eb2c0cb2aa64e7dd056a73d308-- conversation-id 8834 date-last-viewed 0 date-received 1524420583 flags 8590195713 gmail-label-ids 7 6 remote-id 815084