great seeing you, what I was=less than perfectly articulate in trying to explain was the difference bet=een wealth and money. you seemed to equate both with pow=er. however if 10000 individuals with 1 milli=n dollars each in cash. and bill gates. are the totality=of our system. he only owns shares in a co. not mo=ey, there is 200 billion of total "WEALTH&qu=t; , but only 100 billion of money . . . there are also 10k in=ividual votes. to his one . if he actually wants m=ney to spend he must exchange some of his paper for the cash with =A0 one of the ten thousand. not increasing the amount of money, as i=see it according to your definition , in my example bil= owned fifty percent of all the wealth. but actually , in fact=had no money, but had the power to make decisions against the interest of =he 10 thousand. . something fishy. my entire=trip today was worth it , to now learn the answer . " Im =ot sure it can every be right , but it can be better " . = intend to use that alot THANKS
