In other conversion news, plans to convert a landmarked Upper West Side church at 361 Central Park West into condos have been put on hold, according to The Real Deal <<http://therealdeal.com/2016/02/29/uws-church-conversion-into-condos-delayed/>>, because the developer, 361 Central Park West LLC, is waiting on approval from the city Board of Standard and Appeals. The developer (an entity tied to Joseph Brunner) is looking for an exemption from zoning regulations. Mr. Brunner paid $42 million for the property in 2014, and a year later Community Board 7 rejected plans for conversion, which lead to the BSA process. The developer's plans would mean a 35-unit condo.
