Thank you for the prompt response, Ms. Mahnke. The meeting is indeed canceled, and I am afraid I will not budge on that, so you should plan accordingly. I wanted to let you know that today in order to minimize the inconvenience to you. But I'm happy to work with you on another date later this month.

It would be great if we could avoid getting off on an unnecessarily adversarial note, and I am trying to be polite while still making our position clear. You cannot, consistent with either your own policies or the due process clause, force Professor Krauss to have a meeting that he is not prepared to have. Rather than arguing about that over email and inevitably escalating this to the General Counsel's office, I think our time would better spent finding a new date later this month once I've had a chance to get up to speed. This is not a "no," by any means. It is simply a "not yet."

Thanks, and have a nice weekend.

Justin

Good Afternoon Dr. Krauss and Mr. Dillon,

I am acknowledging receipt of the below email and will discuss with the OEI Director when she returns to the office on Monday. At this point, OEI does not consider the appointment to be cancelled. I will provide a further response on Monday.

Thank you,
Carla

Ms. Mahnke and [REDACTED],

My name is Justin Dillon. Professor Krauss has hired me to serve as his advisor in this case. I understand from him that you all have a meeting scheduled for Tuesday during which you are going to ask him about some of the allegations in the case. I am afraid we are going to need to reschedule that for a later date, so that I have time to get up to speed on the case and properly prepare Professor Krauss for this meeting. (I have been out of town all week for my kids' spring break.) I am sorry for any inconvenience, and I will be in touch soon to find a new date.

Thanks very much, and have a nice weekend.
