
From: jeffrey E. <jeevacation@gmail.com>
Sent: Tuesday, September 22, 2015 5:40 PM
To: [REDACTED]
Subject: Re: body paragraph of Virginia Woolf "A room of one's own"

im waiting/

On Tue, Sep 22, 2015 at 11:24 AM, [REDACTED]
[REDACTED] > wrote:

In her thesis, the author infers that in order to create art, all women need financial security and privacy. The lack of the above mentioned results in a lack of freedom. In fact, she expresses this idea of anger and frustration throughout her book using analogies and metaphors. We are immediately immersed in her world of thoughts where women are trapped and discriminated by social institutions, such as libraries. For example, in one of her extracts, the writer creates an image of a library resembling a heaven's door, with a man standing in front of it and denying her admission. In this case, it is possible to infer that the man represents the devil. To the author's surprise, the man is wearing a "black gown" instead of "white wings." In addition, her anger is emphasised by the repetition of the word "never," which gives more weight to her argument. In this chapter, we can clearly feel the oppression and the pain she is suffering. For this reason, wealth is regularly cited as a necessary condition for creativity and a way of establishing one's own rules.

--

=C2 please note

The information contained in this communication is confidential, may be attorney-client privileged, may constitute inside information, and is intended only for the use of the addressee. It is the property of JEE. Unauthorized use, disclosure or copying of this communication or any part thereof is strictly prohibited and may be unlawful. If you have received this communication in error, please notify us immediately by return e-mail or by e-mail to jeevacation@gmail.com <mailto:jeevacation@gmail.com>, and destroy this communication and all copies thereof, including all attachments. copyright -all rights reserved