look at hi.. he says he has worked with ASU counsels=before.. is not adversarial.

I have a few =ocal suggestions but not sure..

Here =s from a law professor at ASU:

"One of the problems in finding a top law firm in this town that can be adverse to ASU is that ASU uses most of these firms, including those I have worked with ♦=A or know people at and thus can recommend on personal experience. For both for ethical and business reasons, however, these firms can't or do not want to be adverse to ASU. The only firm that I =now something about that might be right for you and could take your case is Martin & Bonnett <http://www.martinbonnett.com/> <<http://www.martinbonnett.com/>> I know them because they represented a tenured ASU professor fired on what seemed to many of us at the law school to be a trumped up charge of plagiarism. (She had plagiarized some material in her syllabus for which the university committee hearing her case recommended a relatively light sanction. Crow rejected these findings and fired her. (The scuttlebutt was that she was a major pain in the ass in her department and that was the real ♦=reason she was fired.) My late colleague Joe Feller worked closely with this firm and arranged for the AAUP to file an amicus brief which many members of the law faculty, including me, signed. Crow was none to happy about this, btw. My sense is that although the professor lost her case (courts are reluctant to intervene in these types of cases), Martin & Bonnett did a good job. So when my dean fired a secretary assigned to me, Paul Bender, and several others (including another former dean), Paul and I contacted the firm for some advice. If you would like my help to find a firm in another city, especially LA, = should be able to offer you more selection and a more definite and knowledgeable recommendation. Jim "
