I understand =is reasoning, and I think you can delay a little, but my sense is that =he Origins anniversary serves as a deadline. People equate you with =rigins, and they do not know whether to support the events because they =on't know whether to support you without hearing a statement from you. =f you haven't already, I would recommend talking to Amelia to get her =ake on the timing with regard to the events. I don't think there is any =ay to avoid generating new claims even if you waited 10 years to give a =statement, since some of the accusations in the BuzzFeed article were =resurrected from 10 years ago. And I wouldn't worry too much about the =SU investigation; to my mind that was a ridiculous accusation because =ho would grope someone's breast in a photo that's going to go up on =nstagram for all the world to see? So I think it's probably a =ormality.

Thanks so very much for this, and everything. =nbsp;I will now try and make the changes I made to my version to your =ersion to access the spelling and grammar corrections.. Unfortunately =or some reason when I open your version in word, it doesn't allow spelling or grammar tracking to appear, and when I subsequently paste it into my version, those paragraphs no longer have spelling or grammar tracking in them when I make changes..

Yours are the first happy words I have heard today from outside. ASU is reopening their previously closed investigation into the breast episode on the basis of the BuzzFeed story.. which may be bad news, or it could be a formality.

In any case, here is a key question. My friend, who has been deeply involved with almost all famous #metoo casualties in film, business, govt, etc, strongly feels I should not release a statement at this time. He believes at this time it will generate (probably fake) new claims and such more pressure on institutions to act against me. So, do you have any thoughts about the timing of this? On the other hand here are a hoard of people clamoring for a statement.

Just advice.. the decision will be mine.

Thanks again.

Lawrence
