Subject:	winning them over one by one

dear JE

no problem at all here is an actual exchange i indulged in regarding the Guardian they are holding off for the moment, they don't know quite where the science lies and i always have the option of a rebuttal—if they will not publish it, shame on them, someone will

my dear Ms Dairymple

i have received a lot of hate mail off the Reuters piece but something about yours caught my eye, so i am responding with every good wish

> "By the time they're 14 or 15, they're like grown women were 60 years ago, so I don't see these acts as so heinous," he told Reuters.

It is heinous to engage women in sex before any part of them has sexually matured—that meant—60 years ago, that touching a 17 year old girl or trying to induce her to have sex was heinous done now at age 14 or 15 i do not regard it "AS HEINOUS" just as i said as far as your talking about my family, i have two sons and 3 daughters (and 8 grandchildren)—all have been taught from an early age about the reality of sex so i have never faced these problems as a parent—if i were, yes i would take on the perpetrator but i would also criticize myself for failing to raise my children properly—that is, in a way that protects their interests perhaps you come from a different world in which children are not taught and protected as they should be, in which case, shame on you

"I appreciate your taking the time to respond. I am sincerely glad that both your children, and mine, have been taught how to protect themselves against exploitation.

How I wish they all could be."
